There are flannels in solid colors, stripes and checks, at 30 to 50 cents per yard; mohair at 50 cents (six yards makes a plain costume), surah at 65 to 75 cents and Scotch striped outing flannels at 30 cents (a yard wide). There is also a pretty cotton goods, striped Canton flannel, at 12 cents (a yard wide). All these are pretty and suitable. The Homeless in France. No such institution as our English workhouse exists in France, the only shelter offered those unfortunate members of the human family who find themselves houseless and penniless being the night asylums, which, though admirable institutions in their way, are kept up by private charity; and can receive but a very limited number of the applicants who crowd round the doors both winter and summer. That the absence of workhouses in France does not, however, imply much greater prosperity or thrift than in England is proved by a statement recently made in the chamber of deputies by the member for Indre-et-Loire, who informed the minister of the interior that in one commune of his department reckoning 6,000 Inhabitants, no fewer than 1,400 vagrants had been known to present themselves for alms in a single day. This instance was adduced as an example of the great Increase in the number of vagabonds, due, presumably, as M. Constans observed, to the hard times experienced by many of the working classes during the past few years. It may be added that to put down vagabondage in France is not easy, offenders of this class only being liable to prosecution in the event of their having neither domicile, nor profession, nor recognized trade-three conditions that are rarely met with torether.-London Standard.

The Necklace. Necklaces in the reign of Charles I were made of amber, set in gold. Pharach put a gold chain about Jo-eph's neck as a mark of his authority Among the Tartars of the time of Genghis Khan the necklace was often made of human teeth. The southern negroes constantly wear bead necklaces, looking upon them as In the reign of Henry VIII any one who had not £200 per year income could not wear a necklade.

One of the most valuable and coveted possessions of the vestern Indian is the necklace of grizzly bears' claws. The Puritans abolished necklaces, as they abolished everything they laid their hand on which savored of ornament. Thousands of people place necklaces of coral beads around the necks of babies, with the belief that they will assist the children in teething. - Memphis Ava An Old Rule Well Applied. Creditor-Here, I have found you at last, and I want that little bill of $30
